The Henley Centre for Coaching

The Henley Centre for Coaching is a research and coach training centre at Henley Business School. The Centre is recognised as a world leader for coach training and research, having trained over 2,500 coaches over the past decade. The Centre provides professional coach training with a Professional Certificate in Coaching and an MSc, which are delivered in the UK across Europe and in the Middle East and Africa. Henley’s team is actively engaged in research, contributing to journals, books and best practice publications.

Current research projects include neuroscience and coaching, coach identity and coach development, coaching competences, supervision and coaching ethics. The Centre also provides continuous professional development and supervision for coaches across the world. You can join the Henley Centre for Coaching and access our research, resources, supervision and bi-monthly webinars.

The EMCC

The EMCC exists to develop, promote and set the expectation of best practice in mentoring, coaching and supervision across Europe and beyond, for the benefit of society. EMCC International is a council made up of countries providing coaching and mentoring membership in affiliated countries. Direct membership is available globally where an affiliation does not exist. The EMCC was founded in 1992 by David Clutterbuck, David Megginson, Bob Garvey, Kim Langridge, Julie Hay, Eric Parsloe and Sir John Whitmore.

As of 2018, it has affiliations in 25 countries: Belgium, Cyprus, Croatia, Czech Republic, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg, Morocco, the Netherlands, Norway, Poland, Romania, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Serbia, Turkey, Ukraine and the United Kingdom. The EMCC provides course accreditation, alongside individual accreditation for coaches, mentors and supervisors.

Details can be found at: emccouncil.org/eu/en/accreditation

Membership is open to everyone.

Researchers

The research was co-ordinated by:

Dr Jonathan Passmore
Henley Business School, University of Reading

Dr Hazel Brown
University of Winchester

Dave Tee
University of South Wales

The European Coaching and Mentoring Research Consortium project involved a collaboration with over 50 academics and practitioners, and over 100 professional bodies across Europe.
Introduction

This report provides an overview of the Welsh results from The State of Play in European Coaching & Mentoring (2017) research project, and compares these with the results from England, Scotland and Europe (excluding the UK).

Research method

The aim of the research project was to extend beyond traditional institutional networks and the main European languages (English, French, German and Spanish), to provide a more inclusive research study, recognising the equal value of all European countries, languages and cultures, and of the different professional bodies and institutions.

The research questions were designed by the researchers in collaboration with the EMCC, and were adapted during the development phase. For each country, a research partner or team was identified and a National Research Lead was consulted on whether the survey should be translated, and which language(s) should be used. The National Research Leads led the translation process, which involved initial translation and an independent review.

The survey was launched on 1 March 2017 in 31 languages, ranging from English, Spanish, Portuguese, French and German, to Catalan and Serbian.

The survey was publicised through established coaching federations and management bodies, as well as online through social media interest groups. In total, approximately 100 organisations committed to sharing the research link with their members or to publishing details of the research on their website.

Participants took, on average, 25 minutes to complete the questionnaire.
The development of coaching in Wales

Coaching development in Wales has progressed since the 1980s, becoming a popular HR practice from the early 2000s. Since that date, both the use of coaching and coach training has grown in scale and scope. This is evidenced by the growth in the number of training providers, the length of coach training courses, the development of university coach training programmes and a growth in the membership of professional coaching bodies.

Since 2006, coaching supervision has become a recognised practice and is encouraged by all of the main professional coaching bodies that operate in the UK: European Mentoring and Coaching Council (EMCC); Association for Coaching (AC); International Coach Federation (ICF); World Association of Business Coaches (WABC); and Association of Professional Executive Coaches and Supervisions (APECS).

In addition to the above there are a number of sizable coaching sub-groups within bodies such as the British Psychological Society (BPS) and the British Association for Counselling and Psychotherapy (BACP). These hold membership data at a UK-wide level with the exception of the Association of Coaching, which had 85 Welsh members in summer 2017.

Current hot topics in Welsh coaching practice include:

- Neuroscience coaching – understanding the brain and its impact on human and leadership development
- Mindfulness coaching – how coaches can use mindfulness in their personal coaching practice and with their clients
- Acceptance and Commitment coaching – a third wave cognitive behavioural approach.

Mentoring too has developed since the 1980s and is generally seen as a non-chargeable activity, and is most often conducted within organisations as part of a wider HR strategy, with more senior employees mentoring junior talent.

As in other nations within the UK there are a wide number of providers of coach and mentoring training. Private providers are generally accredited by one of the professional bodies, including: Institute of Leadership and Management (ILM), Chartered Management Institute (CMI), ICF, AC and EMCC. There is one Welsh university providing coach training at the time of the research; the University of South Wales.

Dave Tee

Welsh National Research Lead
In total, 951 participants completed the online questionnaire from the UK; England (708), Scotland (74), Wales (150) and Northern Ireland (19). In some cases, we show the data for each separately. As with all research, not all participants responded to all the questions.
